Dear Parents,

This collection of pictures has been made to help you teach your child the names of some common animals. Please cut on the black lines and place the pages into a small photo album, which can be purchased at many cheap stores for only a couple of dollars.

To start with, your child can look at the pictures with you while you model the word for them (you tell them what it is repeatedly). Keep your model simple, just the name of the animal to start with. Let your child take their special book with them when they go out so they can share the book with others and get even more practice. As they get to know their book better they may start to try to name the animals. Show them you are interested in listening to them and are excited at their efforts, and then they will try it over and over again.

If you want to take this idea further, place pictures of your child, family and things around home in a book. Kids love pictures of themselves and things they know. All the best, the Talking Matters Team.
